Informazione

Rounders originated in England. It is a sport played between two teams, which alternate between batting and fielding. A maximum of nine players can field at one time. Points ("rounders") are scored when the batting team complete a circuit around the field through four bases or posts without being put 'out'.

Cricket is a bat-and-ball team sport that originated in England and is now played in more than 100 countries. A cricket match is made up of two teams with eleven players each and is played on a grass field with a cricket pitch in the centre. There is a wooden wicket at each end of the pitch which is used as a target. The bowler, a player from the fielding team, bowls a hard leather cricket ball from one wicket towards the other, which the batsman, a player from the opposing team, stands in front of to guard. The ball usually bounces once before reaching the batsman. To defend the wicket, the batsman has to hit the ball with a wooden cricket bat. The other members of the bowler's team, fielders, stand in different positions around the field to catch the ball in order to stop the batsman scoring runs and get him out. The batsman has to run between the wickets to score a run. Runs are also scored if the batsman hits the ball to the boundary of the field. The match is won by the team that scores the highest number of runs.
